Conference Description

The 2015 annual ONS Hawaii (Oahu) Chapter conference focuses on the role of genetics and genomics in the care of adult and pediatric oncology patients. Leading national and local experts will speak on topics ranging from personalized medicine to hereditary cancers to health care reform. Recent advances in the understanding of genetics & genomics are changing the future of cancer care. This conference will provide the background necessary to understand these changes.

Program Objectives

After attending this conference, the participants will be able to:

- Explain the relevance of genetics and genomics in oncology treatment and nursing practice.
- Describe ethical, legal, and social issues surrounding genetics and genomics.
- Describe hereditary breast and ovarian cancer syndrome and the Lynch syndrome.
- Discuss the impact of health care reform in cancer care.
